Rogerson Communities hosted its 149th Annual Meeting on May 14, and shared the past year's accomplishments with Board Members, Overseers, and other Rogerson supporters. The event featured a farewell to retiring board members Meredith Clapp, Alice Gray, David Lee, and Ellen Takagi Walsh; in addition to a keynote address from Dr. Walter Leutz.

Leutz teaches about long-term care and aging at the Heller School for Social Policy and Management at Brandeis University. His address focused on what it means to be healthy and how people who don't fit in the predetermined mold for "successful aging" can still age healthfully.

Ellen Takagi Walsh, Meredith Clapp, Rogerson President Jamie Seagle, David Lee and Board Chair Paula Thier. Walsh, Clapp, and Lee were all acknowledged as they retired from the Board of Directors

Rogerson Communities is a leader in building and managing affordable housing for low-income elders and a pioneer in creating innovative adult day health programs offering fitness and strength training, meals, memory loss care and treatment, and social activities so that elders can continue to live independently.
